Measuring the Spiritual Well-Being of the Next Generation

Nobody really likes going on those scheduled visits to the family doctor. Rooms are sterile. Needles are big. It always smells funny. And the rooms they put you in are usually way too small, with never enough chairs, especially when children are along. Not much is inviting about a necessary trip to the doctor.

There are usually only two things about visits to the doctor that every child loves and anticipates. One is the lollipop at the end of the visit and the other is the chance to stand straight and tall against the wall. Sick or well, most every child beams from ear to ear when they are asked to stand with their feet flat on the floor, shoulders back, and head up straight. Now, that is not just any wall. It's the one with the measuring stick picture that usually includes a fun design of a very, very tall giraffe. The anticipation of hearing that familiar and always accurate statement, "you've grown since the last time I saw you" makes every child smile. Immediately, they want to see how much they grew.

Many things in life get measured when it comes to a child's physical growth. The amount of hours of sleep, outdoor play time or the quantity of green vegetables consumed all contribute to successful growth when it comes to standing straight and strong against the towering giraffe who comes alive on an otherwise sterile wall.

As we raise the next generation, it is about more, however, than ensuring they are physically healthy, tall and strong. As parents, pastors and Christian leaders, it is our task to ensure they grow to be spiritual giants. Some of the most asked questions I receive relate to successful children's ministries resources on the market today and how to best measure our effectiveness at discipling the next generation. There are many factors that play into my weighted response. Time spent with God and His Word would be at the top of the measuring chart. Flashy curriculum with lots of activity but little biblical content concerns me, as does teaching without time allotted for solid, interactive discussion. Young minds are filled with questions that do need answers—ones that align with God’s Word. Children need time to ponder Scripture verses and stories, to ask questions, to connect what God is saying in His Word with their everyday lives and the world events that are happening. They need to be taught how to study the Word, and they need to hear the voice of the Holy Spirit speaking to them.

We must structure our teaching times with open space for dialogue, extended prayer and the sharing of needs, time for questions to be answered, thoughts to be shared, and self-discovery as children unpack God’s Word and spend time in it. Discipleship is more than pushing through a lesson and hoping children get what is being taught. It is facilitating the time that a group of children spend together with God and His Word, and you as the teacher, so that the Holy Spirit can impart spiritual truths that go deep into young hearts. It is helping the next generation listen for and recognize the voice of the Spirit so they can apply what God is saying to them. Their lives will reflect the character and nature of Christ when discipleship is not rushed, but is a journey led with prayer, care, purpose and intentionality.

So, what are some good categories on the measuring stick of success when it comes to children being discipled in the ways of the Lord? What defines the well-being of a young, healthy and strong follower of Christ? I challenge you to create a “Spiritual Well-Being Chart” in your church or home – one that’s not determined by height but rather by what gets exhibited for others to see. The list provided can help to guide you. You may wish to add some additional “measurements” of your own, always ensuring they line up with God’s Word and what His expectations are for His followers.

NATALIE ROGGE is a voice and advocate for the need to reach and disciple children in all she does. Natalie gives leadership nationally with The Pentecostal Assemblies of Canada and also locally as children’s pastor at New Life Church in Milton, Ontario, where she and her husband have pastored for 25 years.

Create a Spiritual Well-Being Chart to help define the characteristics of a healthy and strong follower of Christ. Here are some ideas to get you started:

- Worships only God
- Forgives others
- Asks for forgiveness
- Loves others, in word and deed
- Committed to Jesus
- Prays continuously
- Is generous with time, talents, and treasures
- Works hard at not judging others
- Has a gentle spirit
- Shows grace to others
- Thoughtful and kind
- Loves life—genuine joy is evident
- Is humble, not boastful or proud
- Is a peacemaker
- Selfless, always putting others first
- Values and respects other people and their possessions
- Honors parents
- Honest—always tells the truth
- Puts God first, and honors the Sabbath
- Will not lie
- Encourages and supports others
- Does not gossip about others
- Shows self-control
- Is faithful and obedient to God

Top 10 Ways to Minister at Christmas

Pump up your Christmas ministry projects with these ideas. There's one main theme throughout all 10 ideas.

Can you guess what it is? Giving!

1. Start an Angel Tree ministry. Your church can sponsor low-income children from a local school or day care. Or you may want to combine efforts with another church to bless even more children with much-needed clothing and other gifts.

2. Take casseroles or other reheatable meals to the elderly, needy, or people who have suffered a recent loss such as the death of a relative or financial crisis. Pick the group you want to minister to and go for it. The idea is to provide an easy-to-assemble Christmas dinner. Be sure to note any special dietary needs of recipients when planning the meals.

3. Lead your Sunday School class in making a project of purchasing warm blankets, sweaters, gloves, and socks. Then schedule a day to pass them out to the homeless at a local shelter or mission, along with a cup of hot coffee, chocolate, and sandwiches. This will share the love of Christ in a tangible way.

4. Adopt a family in your neighborhood and provide Christmas gifts. Find out specifics about the family so that you can address not just their needs but touch their hearts with your gifts. Prepare a holiday meal for the family. Make it first class from start to finish, beginning with creative personal invitations that will make the guests feel honored, not intimidated.

5. Go caroling. Leave gifts at the homes you visit. They should be practical such as gift cards to area restaurants, coupons that may be redeemed for groceries, food baskets, or coupons redeemable for services from church members: oil changes, lawn care, handyman jobs, etc. Be sure to include a Bible and some information about your church.

6. Cater a meal or special event for people who must work on Christmas Day. Policemen, firefighters, nurses, newspaper staff, etc. You could arrange to have people actually bring in food to the places of work. The group can set up the food area and clean up afterward. And don't forget to sing a few carols while you're there!

7. Adopt college students who have nowhere to go. Foreign students, low-income students who may not be able to return home for the holidays. Invite families to house students in their homes over the holidays and include them in meals and celebrations. Contact local colleges or even high schools to find students who need a place to stay or would just like to participate in a family's Christmas dinner.

8. Have a multicultural, missions-centered Christmas dinner sponsored by your church. Invite people in your community to come and enjoy a meal that features Christmas recipes from all over the world. Choose one or two special missions projects your church can adopt and present the need during this event.

9. Honor soldiers and their families. Work with the families to make and send care packages specific to soldiers' needs. Write special Christmas cards thanking each family for their sacrifice, and contact each family to find out what needs the church can meet. Some ideas include practical services such as car maintenance and handyman tasks to help wives whose husbands are deployed.

10. Contact a local shelter to identify and fill a need they are facing. There are always opportunities to support your local food pantry, Boys & Girls Clubs, pregnancy care center, or Salvation Army. And not all needs are financial. Many places simply need people willing to donate an hour or two of their time to read to children or help dole out soup to those who are hungry.

Until All Know

{we will never forget}

*Some things that are unforgettable
can be forgotten.*

Imagine what it was like to live in a home where your parents or grandparents stood on the shore of the Red Sea when God parted the waters. I have read that up to 50,000 horsemen and 200,000 of Pharaoh's foot soldiers were killed that day while millions of Hebrews were set free from human trafficking and walked toward freedom. The Israelites watched as mankind partnered with the divine to change the course of history. What a remarkable and truly unforgettable experience!

When Moses died, God chose Joshua to lead the people. One of my favorite descriptions of Joshua is recorded in Exodus 33:11: "Thus the LORD used to speak to Moses face to face, as a man speaks to his friend. When Moses turned again into the camp, his assistant Joshua the son of Nun, a young man, would not depart from the tent" (ESV). When no one else was looking, Joshua remained in God's presence.

God encouraged Joshua to be strong and courageous, as the task in front of him would require just as much faith and believe as in the days of Moses. Built on a mound seventy feet high, Joshua was fortified with double walls. The outer wall, based on archaeological evidence, was about twenty-six feet high and sat atop a retaining wall that was ten to fifteen feet high. It was six feet thick. At the top of the earthen embankment sat the inner wall, which was forty-six feet

*It's up to us to take the next generation by the hand and walk
together in full awareness of the power of God.*

above the ground. Joshua 6 records how the God who brought water from the rock in the desert tore down walls that no one could break. On the seventh day, as the Israelites marched around the city they saw the vast walls crumble. God gave the city into their hands. What a truly unforgettable experience!

Joshua led the Israelites to one victory after another. They continued to witness God's provision and power. But some things that are unforgettable can be forgotten.

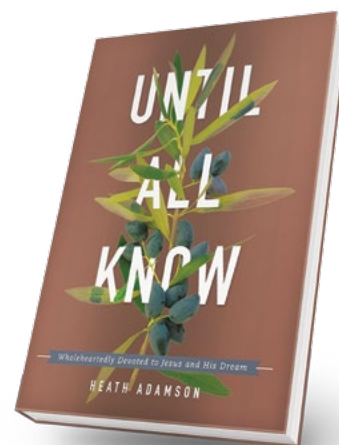

And the people served the LORD all the days of Joshua, and all the days of the elders who outlived Joshua, who had seen all the great work that the LORD had done for Israel. And Joshua the son of Nun, the servant of the LORD, died at the age of 110 years. And they buried him within the boundaries of his inheritance in Timnath-heres, in the hill country of Ephraim north of the mountain of Gaash. And all that generation also were gathered to their fathers. And there arose another generation after them who did not know the LORD or the work that he had done for Israel" (Judges 2:7–10).

This is unthinkable! How does a child grow up in a home with parents or grandparents who had firsthand knowledge of the miracles and wonders God performed in the days of Moses and Joshua without knowing about God? The Bible says they "did not know the LORD." This is a travesty! The most basic human right in the world is the right to know Jesus. It doesn't stop there, though. It says they did not know "the work that [God] had done for Israel." They didn't know the story of the great Jericho walls falling down. They didn't know the story of the Red Sea parting. They didn't know the story of God's grace in providing manna on the desert floor. And worst of all, they didn't even know the miracle-working God behind all the miracles.

We stand on the edge of yet another generation of young people who must know God as well as His works. These two are inseparable: His works reveal His character. We know what it's like to see God provide for our needs. We were there when He took an impossible situation and turned it around. We know His miracles and presence are as real and accessible as ever. That's why it's up to us to take the next generation by the hand and walk together in full awareness of the power of God. This is nothing new. At the epicenter of revival during the days of Azusa Street, a radical and prophetic community of people dared to know God and His works. Our church movement was born as a faith community out of an encounter with Him, and the next generation was already there.

HEATH ADAMSON is the senior director of the Assemblies of God Youth Ministries and author of The Bush Always Burns.

A lot of people look at the dry spiritual climate of our world and feel like revival won't come again. Throughout history, revivals have always involved believers from every generation. But what if the next generation isn't ready to take its place in history?

In Until All Know, Heath Adamson asks, What spiritual seeds are you planting in those around you? Explore the importance of discipling students to be:

- Gospel-Centered
- Spirit-Empowered
- Personally-Responsible for the mission of God

As you journey now is the time to prepare them to respond to the movement of the Spirit and take their place in His story.
